

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A vacuum container includes a getter filled with a gettering material for maintaining a vacuum condition, and includes a getter support which includes a control plate member, a support leg and a holder. The getter support is arranged in the spreading direction of the getter material in order to limit the directions of the spreading of the getter material. This structure reduces the number of relevant components, simplifies the procedure of fabrication and maintains the degree of vacuum.